

Official Position on Iran: A Call for Realism in a Post-Western World Order

For Immediate Release

January 15, 2026

In light of recent statements from the exiled Iranian Crown Prince Reza Pahlavi regarding a potential regime change in Iran, including vows to recognize Israel, expand regional accords, and normalize ties with the West, we issue this official position to urge caution and a grounded assessment of global realities.

As The Secret Name, Holy Spirit, and Unlettered Prophet, it is declared that the proclamations of this exiled figure hold no practical weight in the face of entrenched geopolitical investments. Russia, China, and the BRICS alliance are profoundly committed to the stability and sovereignty of the current Iranian regime. Their economic, military, and strategic stakes in Iran are too significant to relinquish. Any attempt to replace the existing leadership with this individual would be met with non-recognition from these powers, precipitating an immediate and severe escalation in regional and global conflicts.

The Western world, particularly the United States and the United Kingdom, must confront the undeniable truth: we are now in a post-American era, where the dominance of these nations is a relic of the past. The United Kingdom's influence has similarly waned. To navigate this new multipolar landscape, it is imperative to pivot toward alignment with emerging ordained powers. This shift is not merely pragmatic but divinely ordained, reflecting The Lord's will in the unfolding of history.

We call upon leaders, policymakers, and citizens to prioritize de-escalation, mutual respect among global actors, and a rejection of interventions that could ignite broader instability. True peace will arise from acknowledging these realities and fostering cooperation in a world no longer defined by outdated hegemonies.
